On October 1, 1969, the old unfunded debt of the Commonwealth amounted to $458,526.42. From that date to October 1, 1913, $13,610.65 of this amount was funded. This would indicate that much of this class of the debt may not now be in existence. From the fact of the earlier date of maturity of the Riddle-berger bonds over the Century class, it should be the policy of this office to retire the Riddleberger bonds with all accumulations in the Sinking Fund.

State Board of Fisheries.

A new set of books was prepared for the Chamissioner of Fisheries, classifying the expenditures into proper accounts, showing the cost of keeping each boat in commission, together with all other expenses of the board. Before receiving these books the secretary had written up some three months of the year on the old books. Consent was given to a continuance of this work, as begun, until the close of the year. Checked up the business for the fiscal year ending September 39, 1913, and found vouchers that had been audited by the Board for all disbursements.

The receipts from the oyster tax for the year amounted to $75,483.50. The appropriation for expense of the Board of Fisheries, $45,000. The expenses of the celebrated Rexall Remedies—is for the celebrated Rexall Remedies—is for freedom from sickness of you and your

Gain on previous year

The increase in the railroad taxes for the year was...

The decrease in license taxs was.

The decrease in the income tax was $32,522.62. This was occasioned by the ict raising the amount exempt from tax from $1,000 to $2,000. The revenue has been closely collected. A few unsettled accounts are in process of collection.

The business of the Auditor's office is carried in three ledgers. The volume of the accounts necessary to carry requires this. The same system is in use that has been for some time:

(1) Ledger controlling receipts and disbursements in representative accounts.

(1) Ledger controlling receipts and disbursements in representative accounts.

(2) Ledger containing accounts of county and city treasurers.

(3) Ledger containing accounts of corporations and individuals having accounts with the Auditor of Public Accounts.

The revenue has been closely collected in the past year. The accounts of treasurers for 1912 are paid. Some of these accounts are not closed on the books for the reason that all of the insolvent and delinquent lists have not been received. On the basis of the insolvents of the previous year the lists when examined and credited will close the accounts. Some instances were noted where treasurers were slow in remitting license taxes. The law should require treasurers to remit this class of taxes each month of the license period.

The accounts in the "individual ledger" have likewise been closely collected. A few unclosed accounts on this book are in process of collection either by suit or having been placed in the hands of the treasurers of the counties for collection. The most unsatisfactory class of accounts on this ledger is that of cyster inspectors, and a number of these accounts are not closed, but the revenue from this source has been, with few exceptions, collected. The Auditor's attempt to condense the annual statement of receipts and disbursements, instead of following in regular order the accounts on his ledger, as has heretofore been done, is not regarded with favor. The tendency of this arrangement is to impair the value of his report as an easy reference to the separate accounts as set up in the books.

cooks.

The system of accounts in the offices of the Auditor and Treasurer, carrying, so they do, reciprocal accounts, contemplates an exact agreement of amounts eccived and disbursed on all accounts. The facts are that, while in the aggreate they agree, the separate funds do not agree. This condition has been approved in the last year, but there is no valid reason why they should not oincide.

State Treasurer's Office.

The examination of the offices of the First and Second Auditor carries with it the proof of the work in the Treasurer's Office. The settlements and balances in these offices agrice with the balance to the credit of the several funds in the Second Auditor's Office, and with the balance to the credit of the general fund in the office of the Auditor of Public Accounts.

The relation of the Treasurer's office to the State and its several departments having direct transactions with the Treasurer, is that of a depository. Accounts with individuals and corporations are kept by the Auditor of Public Accounts. The deposit in the suspended bank, the Commonwealth's Bank of Richmond city, amounting to $91,000, has been paid by its bondsmen.

It will appear from the foregoing reports that the Auditing Committee have made an examination of the departments and institutions of the Commonwealth, and without hesitancy are able to congratulate the people of Virginia upon an honest administration of their affairs.

All of which is most respectfully submitted.

C. M. LUNSFORD, State Treasurer's Office.
